

University provides mandatory annual dedicated training on social aspects of Sustainability for staff members

The university demonstrates its commitment to sustainable development by providing mandatory annual training for all staff members focused on the social aspects of sustainability. This dedicated training aims to enhance awareness and understanding of key social sustainability themes such as equity, diversity and inclusion (EDI), social justice, human rights, community engagement, and well-being.

By integrating this training into its professional development framework, the university ensures that staff are equipped to contribute to a socially sustainable environment, both within the institution and in their broader academic and professional interactions. This initiative reflects the university's broader sustainability strategy and its alignment with national and global sustainability goals, including the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).
